

Humble ISD summer day camps “brag-worthy”

Humble ISD has been selected for the Texas School Business Magazine’s 2013-2014 edition of “Bragging Rights!” Texas School Business Magazine publishes the special Bragging Rights issue in December and selects “brag-worthy” programs from 12 school districts to highlight. This year, Humble ISD’s Camp Nobis Est and Keep Calm and Lead On summer day camps were chosen for recognition in the statewide publication.

“We are so honored to have been chosen for this special issue,” said Deanne Moore, camp facilitator. “We’re really proud of these programs and want to continue to expand it. Mostly, we’re really proud of our students and all they’ve accomplished. They’re really the ones to brag about for all their hard work both during the camps and in the next phases of their school careers.”

Camp Nobis Est, now in its third year, prepares rising sixth-graders for the next three years of middle school. Campers participate in four sessions designed to empower students to set goals for themselves and plan ahead to achieve success. After seeing the remarkable achievements of Camp Nobis Est, the Humble ISD Education Foundation awarded a grant to fund Keep Calm and Lead On, a camp designed to prepare rising freshmen for high school.
